The Alabama Organ Center dedicates itself to providing a better quality of life for those people who require organ and tissue transplantation, while respecting those families who share.

The Alabama Organ Center had over 50 hospitals participate in the rose vial signing. All of the signed vials were sent to Pasadena to become part of the 2015 Donate Life float... "The Never-Ending Story."

"The Never-Ending Story" is a publication of the Alabama Organ Center.

For Hannah Daye Ridling's family, being honored as an organ donor on the 2015 Donate Life Rose Parade Float is extra special. New Year's Day 2015 would have been Hannah's 21st birthday.

Hannah had a love for animals and was an avid equestrian, ranked nationally in the discipline of Eventing. On May 23, 2010, 16-year-old Hannah fell from the back of a moving vehicle and suffered a fatal brain injury. As an organ donor, her gifts gave three people a second chance at life.

"Our world was shattered," says her mother Cathy. "Knowing how loving and giving Hannah was in life, she would want to continue her loving legacy in death." Hannah's family later found that she had said "yes" to organ and tissue donation when she applied for her temporary driver's license. When Cathy had the opportunity to meet Hannah's double lung recipient, she felt it was an affirmation of the special gift of life.

Memorialized on Hannah's headstone is a quote from an English paper that she wrote on January 7, 2010, two days before registering to become an organ donor. "Whenever I put aside my own needs and put someone else's before my own, I feel like a better person. Helping others adds to your character. It gives you a sense of accomplishment, peace, and humbleness."

"The Never-Ending Story" is a publication of the Alabama Organ Center.

For Hannah Daye Ridling's family, being honored as an organ donor on the 2015 Donate Life Rose Parade Float is extra special. New Year's Day 2015 would have been Hannah's 21st birthday.

Hannah had a love for animals and was an avid equestrian, ranked nationally in the discipline of Eventing. On May 23, 2010, 16-year-old Hannah fell from the back of a moving vehicle and suffered a fatal brain injury. As an organ donor, her gifts gave three people a second chance at life.

"Our world was shattered," says her mother Cathy. "Knowing how loving and giving Hannah was in life, she would want to continue her loving legacy in death." Hannah's family later found that she had said "yes" to organ and tissue donation when she applied for her temporary driver's license. When Cathy had the opportunity to meet Hannah's double lung recipient, she felt it was an affirmation of the special gift of life.

Memorialized on Hannah's headstone is a quote from an English paper that she wrote on January 7, 2010, two days before registering to become an organ donor. "Whenever I put aside my own needs and put someone else's before my own, I feel like a better person. Helping others adds to your character. It gives you a sense of accomplishment, peace, and humbleness."

"The Never-Ending Story" is a publication of the Alabama Organ Center.

For Hannah Daye Ridling's family, being honored as an organ donor on the 2015 Donate Life Rose Parade Float is extra special. New Year's Day 2015 would have been Hannah's 21st birthday.

Hannah had a love for animals and was an avid equestrian, ranked nationally in the discipline of Eventing. On May 23, 2010, 16-year-old Hannah fell from the back of a moving vehicle and suffered a fatal brain injury. As an organ donor, her gifts gave three people a second chance at life.

"Our world was shattered," says her mother Cathy. "Knowing how loving and giving Hannah was in life, she would want to continue her loving legacy in death." Hannah's family later found that she had said "yes" to organ and tissue donation when she applied for her temporary driver's license. When Cathy had the opportunity to meet Hannah's double lung recipient, she felt it was an affirmation of the special gift of life.

Memorialized on Hannah's headstone is a quote from an English paper that she wrote on January 7, 2010, two days before registering to become an organ donor. "Whenever I put aside my own needs and put someone else's before my own, I feel like a better person. Helping others adds to your character. It gives you a sense of accomplishment, peace, and humbleness."

"The Never-Ending Story" is a publication of the Alabama Organ Center.

For Hannah Daye Ridling's family, being honored as an organ donor on the 2015 Donate Life Rose Parade Float is extra special. New Year's Day 2015 would have been Hannah's 21st birthday.

Hannah had a love for animals and was an avid equestrian, ranked nationally in the discipline of Eventing. On May 23, 2010, 16-year-old Hannah fell from the back of a moving vehicle and suffered a fatal brain injury. As an organ donor, her gifts gave three people a second chance at life.

"Our world was shattered," says her mother Cathy. "Knowing how loving and giving Hannah was in life, she would want to continue her loving legacy in death." Hannah's family later found that she had said "yes" to organ and tissue donation when she applied for her temporary driver's license. When Cathy had the opportunity to meet Hannah's double lung recipient, she felt it was an affirmation of the special gift of life.

Memorialized on Hannah's headstone is a quote from an English paper that she wrote on January 7, 2010, two days before registering to become an organ donor. "Whenever I put aside my own needs and put someone else's before my own, I feel like a better person. Helping others adds to your character. It gives you a sense of accomplishment, peace, and humbleness."

"The Never-Ending Story" is a publication of the Alabama Organ Center.

For Hannah Daye Ridling's family, being honored as an organ donor on the 2015 Donate Life Rose Parade Float is extra special. New Year's Day 2015 would have been Hannah's 21st birthday.

Hannah had a love for animals and was an avid equestrian, ranked nationally in the discipline of Eventing. On May 23, 2010, 16-year-old Hannah fell from the back of a moving vehicle and suffered a fatal brain injury. As an organ donor, her gifts gave three people a second chance at life.

"Our world was shattered," says her mother Cathy. "Knowing how loving and giving Hannah was in life, she would want to continue her loving legacy in death." Hannah's family later found that she had said "yes" to organ and tissue donation when she applied for her temporary driver's license. When Cathy had the opportunity to meet Hannah's double lung recipient, she felt it was an affirmation of the special gift of life.

Memorialized on Hannah's headstone is a quote from an English paper that she wrote on January 7, 2010, two days before registering to become an organ donor. "Whenever I put aside my own needs and put someone else's before my own, I feel like a better person. Helping others adds to your character. It gives you a sense of accomplishment, peace, and humbleness."

"The Never-Ending Story" is a publication of the Alabama Organ Center.

For Hannah Daye Ridling's family, being honored as an organ donor on the 2015 Donate Life Rose Parade Float is extra special. New Year's Day 2015 would have been Hannah's 21st birthday.

Hannah had a love for animals and was an avid equestrian, ranked nationally in the discipline of Eventing. On May 23, 2010, 16-year-old Hannah fell from the back of a moving vehicle and suffered a fatal brain injury. As an organ donor, her gifts gave three people a second chance at life.

"Our world was shattered," says her mother Cathy. "Knowing how loving and giving Hannah was in life, she would want to continue her loving legacy in death." Hannah's family later found that she had said "yes" to organ and tissue donation when she applied for her temporary driver's license. When Cathy had the opportunity to meet Hannah's double lung recipient, she felt it was an affirmation of the special gift of life.

Memorialized on Hannah's headstone is a quote from an English paper that she wrote on January 7, 2010, two days before registering to become an organ donor. "Whenever I put aside my own needs and put someone else's before my own, I feel like a better person. Helping others adds to your character. It gives you a sense of accomplishment, peace, and humbleness."

"The Never-Ending Story" is a publication of the Alabama Organ Center.

For Hannah Daye Ridling's family, being honored as an organ donor on the 2015 Donate Life Rose Parade Float is extra special. New Year's Day 2015 would have been Hannah's 21st birthday.

Hannah had a love for animals and was an avid equestrian, ranked nationally in the discipline of Eventing. On May 23, 2010, 16-year-old Hannah fell from the back of a moving vehicle and suffered a fatal brain injury. As an organ donor, her gifts gave three people a second chance at life.

"Our world was shattered," says her mother Cathy. "Knowing how loving and giving Hannah was in life, she would want to continue her loving legacy in death." Hannah's family later found that she had said "yes" to organ and tissue donation when she applied for her temporary driver's license. When Cathy had the opportunity to meet Hannah's double lung recipient, she felt it was an affirmation of the special gift of life.

Memorialized on Hannah's headstone is a quote from an English paper that she wrote on January 7, 2010, two days before registering to become an organ donor. "Whenever I put aside my own needs and put someone else's before my own, I feel like a better person. Helping others adds to your character. It gives you a sense of accomplishment, peace, and humbleness."

"The Never-Ending Story" is a publication of the Alabama Organ Center.

For Hannah Daye Ridling's family, being honored as an organ donor on the 2015 Donate Life Rose Parade Float is extra special. New Year's Day 2015 would have been Hannah's 21st birthday.

Hannah had a love for animals and was an avid equestrian, ranked nationally in the discipline of Eventing. On May 23, 2010, 16-year-old Hannah fell from the back of a moving vehicle and suffered a fatal brain injury. As an organ donor, her gifts gave three people a second chance at life.

"Our world was shattered," says her mother Cathy. "Knowing how loving and giving Hannah was in life, she would want to continue her loving legacy in death." Hannah's family later found that she had said "yes" to organ and tissue donation when she applied for her temporary driver's license. When Cathy had the opportunity to meet Hannah's double lung recipient, she felt it was an affirmation of the special gift of life.

Memorialized on Hannah's headstone is a quote from an English paper that she wrote on January 7, 2010, two days before registering to become an organ donor. "Whenever I put aside my own needs and put someone else's before my own, I feel like a better person. Helping others adds to your character. It gives you a sense of accomplishment, peace, and humbleness."

"The Never-Ending Story" is a publication of the Alabama Organ Center.